Chicago, IL -- The Chicago-based songwriter-led group, Superfrye & the Blue Blazes is releasing a soulful new rendition of Blues artist Freddy King’s song “Christmas Tears” on December 1, 2021.

Superfrye is a fixture on the Chicago music scene and has spent decades watching and learning from the most talented musicians in the city...On “Christmas Tears,” she plays with them.

Superfrye is a songwriter and guitarist with blues and country roots. Her music has been called “street folk” and dark Americana while her raw vocal style has drawn comparisons to Patti Smith, Janis Joplin and even Bob Dylan.

Constantly evolving and showing new facets of her creativity, she is collaborating on this “Christmas Tears” single. She is joined by top Blues and Rockabilly artists who make up the Blue Blazes.

About the Blue Blazes: Delmark recording artist, blues guitarist and songwriter Johnny Burgin has released ten albums and recorded with blues giants Pinetop Perkins, Taildragger, Sam Lay and many more. Teresa Drda and Michael Hogeorges have been the rhythm section for countless rockabilly bands including Barb Clifford and the Shakin’ Tailfeathers, The New Heartaches, and The Honeybees. They have performed at rockabilly festivals all over the world.

These four musicians come together to create a rendition of “Christmas Tears” that is raw, honest and filled with excitement. On December 1, 2021 this recording of “Christmas Tears” will be available for purchase and streaming.

The song was originally released in the 1960s, performed by Freddy King, a soulful blues guitarist and songwriter born in Texas who spent part of his career in Chicago; he was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 2012.
